The "Handbook of Technical Writing" describes the craft's goal this way: "The goal of technical writing is to enable readers to use a technology or understand a process or concept. Because the subject matter is more important than the writer's voice, technical writing style uses an objective, not a subjective, tone. The writing style is direct and utilitarian, emphasizing exactness and clarity rather than elegance or allusiveness.

Technical Writing: Definition and Observations

In most cases, the only technical documents that can be advantageously studied in a class of English for non-native speakers – particularly for student-age learners and at intermediate level – are texts written for a non-specialist readership; documents that talk about scientific or technical topics in a language that can be understood by all.
